Private motorcycle collector and enthusiast Daniel Schoenewald invites you to his company's manufacturing facility in Camarillo to view his private motorcycle collection located on the building's 2nd floor. A 20,000-squarefoot white-walled room houses rows of rare Ducatis, Triumphs, Commandos and other vehicles. A dozen are the first of their kind. One's former owner is retired professional racer Randy Mamola. Another inspired the design for a well-known truck in the 2003 Quentin Tarantino film "Kill Bill."

Though the one-of-a-kind collection is hidden in Camarillo's business district, spectators from around the world have found their way to it. Schoenewald has had visitors from places like Finland, Norway, Japan, Germany and Switzerland. The private collection can be visited by appointment only.
